General Decline Caused by Disappointment Over Moderate Investment Demand.

Movement in Currency Turns in Full Tide From Interior to New York.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK. Jan. 6.—Gathering disappointment over the moderate investment demand for stocks and over the reluctance of the outside public to come into the market, caused the general decline in prices to-day. It did not appear that there was any great amount of liquidation in the movement and there were no news developments to prompt a selling of securities. With the exception of a momentary advance in Amalgamated Copper and some continued absorption of the Erie and Reading, there was no strong feature at any time to-day. The failure of explanation for the strength of Erie aroused some suspicion of a professional manipulative origin for it so that it lost its effect on the rest of the market. The rise in Amalgamated Copper was connected with discussion of its dividend prospects. As to the features of the decline it became fairly general during the course of the day and was apportioned, not according to the nature or condition of the stocks, but according to the week's previous advances, thus indicating a profit-taking character for the movement. The news of the day did not change from the recent favorable tenor as affecting property values. Builders reporting earnings showed a deviation from the recent advancing tendency. In the cotton market the decline in prices was considered to be attracting at last large buying orders from foreign spinners. It is evident that the movement of currency had turned in favor of the bond market, but the preliminary signs indicated a gain of upwards of $6,000,000. The fall in price gained its greatest velocity in the final hour and overran itself, resulting in an active demand to cover shorts by the room traders. The closing was irregular.

The bond market was broad, but the movement continued irregular; total sales, per value, $625,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on the last call.

The total sales of stocks were $13,800 shares.
